

Graduate Courses Offered

Graduate courses at Appalachian are numbered 5000 and above. 5000 is master's level; 6000 is specialist level; 7000 is doctoral level. Selected courses at the 5000 level are dual listed with senior undergraduate (4000-level) courses, meaning that the two courses may be offered in the same room at the same time. Graduate students in these courses will have additional requirements specified on the syllabus to ensure a more in-depth study of the course topics. These dual-listed courses are indicated with a notation in [brackets] at the end of the course description. All the courses in this bulletin, except courses numbered 5989, 6989, and 7989, are courses that count toward a program of study for at least one graduate degree. 5989/6989/7989 courses are intended for continued enrollment purposes only, and do not count on a program of study.

The table below lists course disciplines along with the departments that offer the courses, and the sections of this Bulletin in which the course descriptions may be found. Courses in this Bulletin are listed as follows:

Prefix Number. Title/(Semester Hours).Term(s) of Offering. Short description of course contents.

For example: MAT 5610. Analysis I/(3).S. This is an MAT (mathematics) course numbered 5610 entitled "Analysis I" offered for 3 semester hours credit usually in the Spring semester. Semesters of the year in which the course is anticipated to be offered are represented by symbols: "F" for Fall semester, "S" for Spring semester, and "SS" for a Summer Session. These semester offering codes are guidelines only, and departments may deviate from the listing for enrollment or staffing considerations.
